

Boost to campaign to save venue

Music venue Passing Clouds (above) in Richmond Road, Dalston, has been listed as an Asset of Community Value by the Council

THE campaign to save iconic Dalston music venue Passing Clouds has been given a boost.

The Council has used powers to make the Richmond Road venue an Asset of Community Value, giving it protected status. The venue shut in August after being served with an eviction order following the announcement of redevelopment plans by the building's owners. There have been huge protests against the closure, backed by music industry celebs, and with hundreds marching in support of the venue. For more, turn to page 3.

FAIR WAGE FOR ALL

THIS Living Wage Week, the Council is calling on businesses to help make Hackney a London Living Wage borough: where no workers are paid less than they can reasonably live on.

The Council's efforts to ensure all of its staff and contractors are paid a fair wage were recognised recently, when it was given national Living Wage accreditation.

All direct employees – as well as temporary, agency staff and apprentices over 18 – have long received the London Living Wage.

As Council contracts have come up for renewal, including most recently adult homecare services, over 800 more people are now receiving the wage – currently £9.40 per hour.

The London Living Wage is calculated to be the amount someone in London needs to earn to reasonably live on.

Businesses do not need to pay this amount by law: the legal, National Minimum Wage is just £5.55, rising to £7.20, depending on age.

Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Philip Glanville, said: "Paying staff the London Living Wage brings a multitude of benefits to a local business. From a happier, more content and productive workforce, to helping to sustain a thriving local economy.

"We are helping to set an example to other businesses across Hackney to make pay equal and sign up to become London Living Wage accredited."

The Living Wage Foundation is promoting the benefits of paying a fair wage from 30 October to 5 November.

Art proves powerful

CHILDREN and their parents held a rally on the Town Hall steps, inspired by Hackney Museum's exhibition on black British art and activism.

Local artist Ekua McMorris led 30 children, aged three to 12, and their parents around the museum on 25 October to discover how activism has influenced black British art since the 1960s.

She then ran a workshop helping participants to formulate their own people power-inspired creations and learn first-hand how to channel politics into art.

Three actors from the Access All Areas theatre group also joined the workshop. The award-winning theatre company for adults with learning disabilities has been based in Hackney since 1976.

Once placards and banners had been made, the actors led a march out of the museum to the Town

“ One young boy was excited to take his banner into school and tell his classmates all about Black History Month ”

Hall, where the families held their own people power rally and proudly displayed their creations.

The children expressed the political concerns of their generation and many of the banners contained the slogan #Blacklivesmatter, a global campaign that originated in America against police shootings.

Ekua said: “It was great to see the enthusiasm from children, with one young boy excited to take his banner into school and tell his classmates all about Black History Month.”

The Council's Black History Season continues until early December. It includes a celebration evening for the life and times of South African civil rights leader Nelson Mandela, which will include readings, music and dance, at Hackney Museum on 1 December.

1. Supporters outside Passing Clouds in Dalston; 2. Singer Paloma Faith has backed the campaign to save the venue; 3. Passing Clouds played host to local and international musicians

A lifeline for venue

CAMPAIGNERS were celebrating after a major boost to their fight to save the iconic Dalston music venue Passing Clouds from closure.

The Council has used powers to make the Richmond Road venue an Asset of Community Value (ACV). It had shut in August after being served with an eviction order, following months of legal wrangling when the building's owners announced plans to redevelop the site.

Huge protests followed, with hundreds marching through the streets in support of the venue. Celebrity backers included chart-topping local singer Paloma Faith.

“ This sends out a strong message about the cultural value of our live music venues ”

An ACV gives buildings protected status. It means any landlord wanting to sell a building must give the community up to six months to raise the funds to buy the property, although, they do not have to sell it to a community group.

It also means that owners cannot demolish or change its use without permission.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: “This sends out a strong message about the cultural value of our live music venues, and how we as a Council will seek to protect them. Sadly this doesn't mean Passing Clouds will be able to reopen immediately –

ACV-status only offers groups the opportunity to express an interest in buying the property if the owner plans to sell it – but I hope it serves as a boost to the campaigners. This venue and the community developed around it is important and should be considered in any plans.”

The Council previously awarded ACV status to the Chesham Arms, in Mehetabel Road, E9, when a new owner announced plans to turn the much-loved pub into flats. The status helped to save the now thriving pub, which reopened last year.

Residents' views wanted on how to plan for a growing population

WHAT will Hackney look like in 2033? That's what residents are being asked to consider as the Council prepares to draft the borough's next Local Plan.

The Local Plan 2033 is a planning document which gives developers, landowners and the Council a set of priorities and guidelines about what the borough's needs are over the coming years.

It is predicted that the borough's population will grow to 317,000 by 2033. The increase will require a further 29,886 homes, as well as placing additional demand on the borough's infrastructure; including transport, the public realm, community and leisure spaces, health services and school places.

This is the first consultation phase of the plan and drop-in events are due to be held on: 10 Nov, 3-6pm, junction of Mare Street and Westgate Street (outside Space Studios), E8; 11

Nov, 1-3pm, Stoke Newington Library, N16; 14 Nov, 3-6pm, Wally Foster Community Centre, Marsh Hill, Homerton Road, E9; 17 Nov, 2-5pm, Hackney House, 25-27 Curtain Road, EC2A; 21 Nov, 3-6pm, Wrens Park Community Hall, Warwick Grove, E5;

22 Nov, 4-7pm, The Redmond Community Centre, Kayani Avenue, N4; 24 Nov, 1-3pm & 5-7pm; Dalston CLR James Library, E8.

Shining a light on a troubled world

Award-winning photographer Zed Nelson has documented the civil war and famine in Somalia, America's deadly love affair with guns, and the intense period of change and gentrification of Hackney in the last few years

By Harriet Worsley

I WASTED a good couple of years just doing nothing and being a wastrel," says internationally award-winning photographer Zed Nelson. Adding: "I left school with very low ambitions and hung around riding a motorbike, doing mundane jobs and being an idiot."

Young Zed had arrived in the UK at the age of four, after his family were forced to flee Idi Amin's brutal regime in Uganda. They moved to Hackney, where the photographer still lives and he had the 'light-bulb moment' that rescued him.

He says: "I suddenly thought, I've got to do something with my life."

He retook his A-levels and did a course in 'photography as a fine art' at polytechnic. While there, he went back to Uganda. It was to spark his second 'light bulb moment'.

He says: "I went to photograph this forgotten massacre. While I was out there, I found the political and documentary focus of my work. I knew my photography was going to be driven by storytelling."

So he began going to magazines and newspapers. He says: "I was pitching ideas and getting lots of rejections, until finally someone said 'How much would it cost to do this?'"

From then on, his work shone a light on some of the most troubled areas of the world. In 1992, he travelled to Somalia to document the civil war and subsequent famine. He says: "I was really unprepared for what I saw. The famine had barely been reported. People were dying of hunger. The guns that had been used in the civil war had been pouring in from the developing world: the US and Russia. It was like a crash course in global politics."

"I was in a car when it was ambushed in a machine gun attack. My interpreter was hit in the neck"

It was while working in Afghanistan that the impact of those guns really hit home. He says: "I was in a car when it was ambushed in a machine gun attack. My interpreter was hit in the neck. It was terrifying."

Once home, he decided to shift his focus towards the countries that manufacture the weapons. His first book 'Gun Nation' was the result, a disturbing look at America's deadly love affair with guns. It won five major international awards and, says Nelson, 'really ruffled feathers in the States'.

His next project revolved around the beauty industry which was exporting 'a very Western idea of what beauty should look like. Packaging and then selling that ideal around the globe'.

The resulting book 'Love Me' was published in 2010 and received First Prize in the 2010 Pictures of the Year International Awards.

Then, something happened: Nelson got tired of travelling. So he began wandering Hackney, documenting its gentrification, what he calls 'the intense period of change that was happening from around 2011'.

In 2014, the project was turned into a book 'Portrait of Hackney'. His travelling days, however, are not over and he has just finished a film 'Gun Nation' in which he returns to America and interviews the people he photographed back in 2000.

"I realised that half a million people had been killed by guns inside the USA since I'd last been there. That's more than have died in all the wars since World War Two."

Zed Nelson's politicisation shows no signs of slowing, after all.

Park plans on show

RESIDENTS are invited to find out more about plans to redevelop and restore Springfield Park at a drop-in event next month.

Visitors will be able to talk to the team developing the proposals and tell the Council what they think of the scheme. There will also be free activities for adults and children, including face painting and ecology tours.

Everyone is welcome to come along to an event marquee, outside the café near the Springfield Road entrance, on Sunday, 6 November, from 11am to 3pm.

The project has received initial support and development funding through the Heritage Lottery Fund's Parks for People programme.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for

Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "The project will restore the landscape and historic buildings within Springfield Park, drawing on its rich history and heritage.

"We want to involve people who use the park, so hope they can attend the drop-in event.

"We'll also be running a programme of activities and events alongside the restoration, so residents can get involved and keep up-to-date with the project."

It's now much easier for cyclists to wheel bikes over Lea

Innovative cycle ramp allows riders to cross bridge easily

AN AWARD-winning cycling ramp has been fitted to a bridge across the River Lea, allowing cyclists and pedestrians to use the space together.

Springfield Park and the River Lea have seen a surge in the numbers of cyclists using the open space and thoroughfares in recent years.

However, the steep bridge at the bottom of Spring Hill, crossing the border between Hackney and Walthamstow, is stepped, making it difficult for cyclists to use.

The ramp, designed by Cyclehoops, seeks to solve this with a narrow channel that runs along one side of the bridge, allowing cyclists to manoeuvre their bike wheels into it and wheel it up and across.

Hackney resident Lynn commented: "I think it's absolutely brilliant. I usually struggle with my bike because it's really heavy, but this has enabled us to get our bikes up and down really easily."

Users of open spaces are being asked for their views

THE Council has commissioned a comprehensive assessment of open spaces and leisure facilities in the borough.

Hackney is keen to get a better understanding of the leisure and recreational needs within the borough and would therefore like to know what residents think about existing open spaces.

The short survey takes about 10 minutes to complete, to have your say, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/parks

Recycling pays off for resident after he wins prize in charity draw

Nadeem Ali won the prize after completing ecoACTIVE's survey

LOCAL charity ecoACTIVE has rewarded one Hackney resident for getting involved with recycling in the borough.

Nadeem Ali completed a survey on his recycling habits for the charity at an event in June. After agreeing to complete a follow-up questionnaire, he was entered into a prize draw for £25 of Love2shop vouchers and some Hackney recycling freebies, which he won.

When asked what he thought about recycling in Hackney, Nadeem said: "Recycling in Hackney makes other boroughs green with envy!"

"We have relatives who live in another London borough who wish they could get their food waste recycled."

He added: "The food waste bins are brilliant. Our normal bins don't smell as much as they used to. And the foxes no longer rip rubbish bags open as there is no food in them."

ecoACTIVE is an environmental education charity based in Kingsmead estate. It is funded by the Council and runs a wide variety of workshops for children and adults throughout Hackney, covering all aspects of recycling, as well as local environment quality and air pollution.

Residents celebrate after receiving their certificates for achievement and progress in ESOL courses over the past year

Hard work pays off

THERE was an air of celebration at Hackney Empire as 140 people received certificates for achievements and progress in English for Speakers of Other Languages courses.

Over the past year, hundreds of residents have attended ESOL courses, which help people access further education and boost their employment prospects.

The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Rosemary Sales, and Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment Skills and Human Resources, attended the event to give out the awards and congratulate course graduates.

“ESOL courses help people access further education and improve prospects for employment”

Tutor Charlotte Schwartz with high achiever Silvia Brunetta

Cllr Williams said: “Hackney has been shaped by people from all over the world, it is great to share in the joy and achievement of those who are learning.”

Hackney Learning Trust’s Adult Education team works closely with schools, children’s centres and community organisations to encourage residents with limited language skills to sign up for the courses.

Silvia Brunetta, originally from Italy and who now lives in Hackney Central, received her ESOL level 1 certificate at the event on 19 October, after completing the course this summer.

She is now studying for an advanced GCSE certificate in English. As she accepted a special commendation for outstanding achievement, she told everyone: “Working hard works!”

Pupils help clean up Clapton

IT WAS a case not just of whistling, but of painting, and debating while you work when the annual Clean Up Clapton Day was held at BSix College. The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Rosemary Sales was joined by local schoolchildren as pavements were jet-cleaned and litter cleared. Pupils from Al-Falah school used litter grabbers from the Council’s cleansing department to pick up rubbish, while Millfields primary pupils took part in a painting competition on the theme of ‘cleaning up’. Stalls from safer neighbourhood and environmental groups handed out information on recycling, pollution and crime control before a ‘Have Your Say’ event was held in the college’s lecture theatre. The panel discussion ranged from Brexit, extremism and disability rights.

Travelling back to the future

YOUNGSTERS have been busy creating letters and drawings this half term to bury in a time capsule for future residents to discover. Earlier this year, renovation work at Hackney Town Hall uncovered a time capsule dating back to the 1930s. In it were preserved the minutes of council meetings and architectural maps of the building. After the decision was made to create a new capsule to bury alongside the old one, Hackney Museum became a venue for its production. Over half term, templates and materials prompted children of all ages to produce materials of their own for the capsule. The capsule will be buried in a ceremony to mark the completion of renovation works in the New Year.

Charity’s grant helps to launch children into the world of engineering

The King’s School, Winchester, won the Faraday Challenge 2015-16

HACKNEY pupils will be testing their skills with the world’s largest engineering institution, thanks to a new grant.

The Jack Petchey Foundation, an East London charity that aims to raise the aspirations of young people, has launched a new fund in collaboration with the Institution of Engineering and Technology (IET) in Stevenage. The money will enable schools in London and Essex to take part in the institution’s Faraday Challenge Days.

Designed to give Year 8 students a taste of working as an engineer, the day-long event challenges 12 to 13-year-olds to split up into teams to research, design and build prototype solutions to tough engineering problems.

Trudy Kilcullen MBE, CEO of the Jack Petchey Foundation, said: “Expanding our support for the IET’s Faraday Challenge Days will mean even more students being encouraged to become the engineers and inventors of tomorrow. I recommend anyone interested in STEM subjects to join up.”

The IET plans to use the grant to run 50 events. Hackney schools that would like to take part in a Faraday Challenge Day, should e-mail: faraday@theiet.org

News in brief

Teen fosters links with police

A TEENAGER from Hackney is campaigning to improve relations between police and young people.

Pembe Tokluhan, 18, who grew up in N16, wants to encourage both groups to open up a dialogue and understand more about each other’s lives.

She partnered with the charity Fixers to make a film on the topic, which was broadcast on ITV London.

Pembe’s job as a sound technician brought her into contact with a band whose members include police officers.

She said: “I hope my project makes a positive impact on the way we perceive each other.”

Fixers works with young people, aged 16 to 25, across the UK by providing them with resources to help them campaign on issues they feel strongly about.

New ceramics studio opens

A LEADING artist has opened his new Hoxton studio, offering a space for local people to learn about ceramics and take part in taster workshops.

Town Gas is a new resource for artists, schools and community groups in Hackney, and was officially opened on 13 October. It features London’s first publicly accessible gas-fired kiln.

For the past year, artist Aaron Angell has been training a group of 16 to 24-year-olds – who were not previously in employment, training or higher education – to run pottery workshops at the studio and pass on their new skills to the local community.

Aaron said: “By opening a gas kiln in the studio, we will be opening up a whole new world of possibilities to the young people, artists and groups who use the space.”

Steps to live better

RESearch suggests that about 800 people in Hackney and the City are living with Parkinson's Disease, and a new project at St Joseph's Hospice is aiming to raise both their fitness levels and spirits.

'Dancing with Parkinson's' is a programme of free classes for people of all ages with the condition, as well as their family and carers. Led by dancer Danielle Teale and accompanied by professional musicians, participants are guided through both seated and standing exercises.

The classes aim to

“As I become more restricted by the disease, it gets harder to travel about. But after these classes, I live better” improve stamina, flexibility and strength, while also encouraging self-expression.

Danielle, who lives in Hackney, explained: “The classes provide an artistic, creative and sociable activity, giving people the opportunity of escapism and freedom from day-to-day life with Parkinson's.”

Leslie, a dance class participant, said: “As I become more restricted by the disease, it gets harder to travel about. But after these classes, I walk better, talk better and live better. The specialised movements help maintain my body, my mind and my spirits.”

News in brief

A BUSY palliative care nurse has won plaudits for a photo of a nesting coot in Victoria Park that she snapped while on her lunch break.

Carolyne Barber, who works at St Joseph's Hospice, entered the picture into the British Wildlife Awards.

She said: “I was having a cup of coffee when I was lucky enough to capture the moment when the gorgeous chicks decided to take a peek at the world. I think they have a certain beauty and you can see their mother's love in this picture, that's why I called the picture 'Proud Mummy'.”

The photo was judged among the top 10 of thousands of entries and is being published in the British Wildlife Book and calendar.

Carolyne's photography is also proudly displayed on the walls of the hospice in Mare Street.

Views sought on child obesity

RESIDENTS in Hackney are being encouraged to share their views on how children in the borough can be supported to lead healthier lives as part of a new London-wide conversation on childhood obesity.

The Council has joined with other local authorities and NHS groups to launch The Great Weight Debate, which asks residents to complete a short survey on what changes they think would make it easier for people to make healthy choices. This will provide ideas for changes that can be made at a community and London-wide level.

Hackney has the highest rate of childhood obesity in London, both when children start primary school and when they begin secondary school.

The survey takes five minutes to complete and can be found at: www.surveymonkey.co.uk/r/GWD2016

More people offered flu vaccination as biggest ever drive launches this winter

At risk adults are among those who are eligible for the vaccine

PUBLIC Health England has launched a 'Stay Well This Winter' campaign, which marks the biggest ever influenza vaccination programme in England.

This year, more than 707,600 children in London, aged two to seven, will be offered the protection.

At risk adults, including those with long-term health conditions, pregnant women and those over 65 will also be offered a flu vaccination. An extension of the programme to children in school Year Three means a further 107,000 can be vaccinated.

Children aged two, three and four can get the vaccination from their GP. Parents of children in Years 1, 2 and 3 are asked to give permission for their child to receive a free nasal spray vaccination at school.

It is estimated that several million people get influenza each winter, with more than 2,000 NHS intensive care admissions across the UK last year.

It can also be dangerous for those with long-term health conditions because if they get influenza, it is more likely to develop into a serious illness, which could result in admission to hospital. Those eligible should contact their GP, pharmacist or midwife, as appropriate.

For more info, visit: www.nhs.uk/staywell.

Anyone with questions about the flu vaccination can visit a local pharmacy or speak to their GP.

A call for women's rights

By Niti Acharya

BLACK British feminism in Hackney from the 1970s to 1990s had its historical roots in postcolonial activism and the struggles of women migrants from the Caribbean, Africa and the Indian subcontinent who came to live in the UK during a post-war recruitment drive for cheap labour in the 1940s and 1950s.

Fair and equal representation for Hackney's diverse communities on local and national issues was a challenge. Organisations were set up to improve this by targeting specific groups, such as the Black People's Association and Black and Ethnic Minority Women. Others were showing their sympathies with groups, movements or activities, such as radical feminism or the Black Power political movement.

Arts and culture were used heavily to support women to express their identities such as through touring exhibitions like 'In Her Own Image' (1990), a display of black women's visual art in Hackney. This featured the work of Simone Alexander, Barbara Bennett, Georgina Grant, Claudette Johnson and Ingrid Pollard.

In the early 1980s, Pollard and Johnson, among others, worked at the Lenthall Road Workshop (1976-1990s) in Haggerston. They supported people to create their own prints to express themselves, develop their skills or to print leaflets for wider distribution. The workshop evolved over time to become a feminist photography and screen-printing centre for the local community, with a focus on black women.

“The Lenthall Road Workshop supported users to create their own prints to express themselves”

Sistren Theatre Collective (1977-present) began as an organisation of working class women who used popular theatre techniques to explore the social, political and legal conditions and status of Jamaican women. The collective toured Hackney in 1990 to share these techniques with local women, many of whom had roots in Jamaica.

Theatre of Black Women (1982) was established in Dalston by Bernardine Evaristo, Patricia Hilaire and Paulette Randall. It was in response to the lack of roles for black actors at the time. Its aim was to promote positive depictions of black women.

The company ran workshops on drama and theatre writing for young women in Hackney. The co-founders are still active in their individual disciplines. Randall was associate director for the London 2012 Olympics opening ceremony.

Angela Davis' visit to Hackney in 1986 sparked widespread interest among a young black British generation who wanted to have their voices heard. She was a prominent counterculture activist in the 1960s. As leader of the Communist Party USA, she had close relations with the Black Panthers and was involved in the civil rights movement.

Black Women in the Arts was established in 1995 to provide African and Caribbean communities in the borough with entertainment opportunities. The group held regular events, sometimes attended by hundreds of people. These were mainly attended by women seeking opportunities to share their artistic skills, which led the organisation to have a strong female focus.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3220. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.

Pumpkins are in season, and everyone's buying them for Halloween. But there is a lot more you can do with the humble pumpkin.

Trainee Levi said: "I wrote this recipe to share with the community because I believe everyone should have a warm hearty meal, that has a lot of nutritional value to keep them going through the winter."

Spiced pumpkin soup

Makes 6-8 portions

Preparation time
1 hour

Cooking time
1 hour 30 mins

Ingredients

- 1 pumpkin
- 2 onions
- 4 carrots
- 6 cloves of garlic
- 3 sticks of celery
- 1 tbsp of thyme
- 1 tin of coconut milk
- 3 sweet peppers (1 of each colour)
- Ginger
- Two litres of stock
- Cinnamon
- Salt
- Pepper.

- Finely chop the thyme and ginger, and crush the garlic cloves
- Add the ground cinnamon, salt and pepper and season the vegetables with this mix
- Put them in the oven to roast
- Whilst the vegetables are in the oven roasting, add 2 vegetable stock cubes to a pot of water and bring to boil. If the vegetables need more time, bring the pot back down to a medium heat whilst waiting to ensure that the stock doesn't evaporate
- Remove the roasted vegetables from the oven and add them to the stock. Bring to a simmer and let the flavours soak through
- Add the coconut milk and simmer for about 20 minutes
- Blend into the soup to required thickness. Add water if too thick
- Add further seasoning to taste
- Serve with bread or croutons and enjoy.

Method

- First pre-heat the oven to 180°C
- Then cut all of the vegetables and put them in a tray

Gym facilities and attractions at parks in the spotlight

THE Council is currently consulting on plans to improve the gym facilities in Millfields Park.

The consultation asks residents for their views on two proposed options; the first is to improve existing trim trail gym equipment at Millfields; the second is to create a new dedicated gym area to the north of the children's play area by Casimir Road, and remove existing equipment.

Have your say on the proposals by dropping by the play area at Millfields on Saturday, 26 November, between 11am and 3pm. Or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/millfields-park

The consultation ends on 9 December.

The Council also wants to hear people's views on managing Clissold Park.

Heritage Lottery funding awarded in 2009 for extensive restoration work to the park and the historic Clissold House is coming to an end in March next year. The Council wants to consult on how resources can be targeted effectively in the future.

Comment on the proposals at a drop-in session at Clissold House Café, on Saturday, 12 November, between 2pm and 4pm. Or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/clissold-park

The consultation ends on 11 December.

Residents are being asked for their views on Clissold Park
